

Noyes Backs Milk Plan in Grain Speech

Tells State Dealers Group State-U.S. Order Is Dairies' Only Hope

"Not Regimentation" Agriculture Commissioner Points Out Producers Proposed Measure

New York State's milk industry can only be stabilized through passage of complementary Federal and State marketing orders, Holton V. Noyes, Albany, State Commissioner of Agriculture, told members of the New York State Hay and Grain Dealers' Association at closing sessions of their 22d annual convention at Hotel Syracuse Friday.

"Farmers throughout the State will cast their votes today and tomorrow as to whether the proposed Federal-State order should be accepted," Commissioner Noyes said. "I sincerely hope they will vote in the affirmative. I am convinced that metropolitan milk producers' problems can only be solved by passage of this important measure."

The proposed orders provide that a uniform price be paid by all dealers for milk for the same use and that each producer share in the benefits of the fluid market and in the cost of handling and controlling all surplus milk.

"Such talk as you hear about the milk order, being an example of regimentation and government interference in purest poopycock," Noyes declared. "The measure was originally produced by the producers themselves and members of the industry, in cooperation with the two governments, will decide on all rules once the order becomes effective."

More than 50 members of the association were present at the convention's closing sessions Friday morning. Officers re-elected included:

Willard Frank of Altamont, president; Emil Schulman of Rochester, vice president; D. Clifford Jones of Westport, secretary; and Maurice Durfee of Fall River, Mass., and William H. Archer of Coldwater, directors for three years.

Speakers, besides Commissioner Noyes, included Prof. L. C. Cunningham of Cornell University, Ithaca, who spoke on "The Condition of the Dairy Business," and W. D. Slaughter of Syracuse, president of the Central New York Smaller Business Association.

State Senator Joe R. Hanley was principal speaker at a convention dinner at Hotel Syracuse Thursday night. He discussed "The New Deal's failure to effect the return of prosperity," declaring that "too many citizens of the United States feel the Government owes them a living as the result of President Roosevelt's policies."

"If we are ever to be saved from the present-day social and economic chaos we must return the meaning of the word 'work,'" Senator Hanley said. "People must become less interested in what they get out of life and more interested in what they put in it."

"Our trouble is that they've been getting out of it for too long. There are no longer enough people willing to contribute something to the government—everyone seems to demand something from it."

In a speech urging convention delegates to vote against "New Deal luncheon" at elections this fall, Raymond Tiffany, of Akron, O., general counsel of the National Small Business Men's Association, declared: "The prevalent theory seems to be that the less you produce the more wealth will be created and eventually every American citizen will become fabulously wealthy by producing nothing. We've had too much tinkering by miniature-minded political reformers."

"From 1923 through 1937 Federal expenditures for the primary purpose of increasing the price on farm products have aggregated $3,600,000, 000 over and above the routine departmental operations of the Department of Agriculture.

"Today prices on farm products are lower than they were in 1933 despite this tinkering," Tiffany said. "It's time to throw this type of waste, inefficiency and poor judgment out the window and get back to good common sense methods of doing business."

Nathan C. Miller, 'Fiddler,' Makes His 81st Birthday A Day Filled With Music

"HOW ABOUT 'TURKEY IN THE STRAW'?" That's what the quizzical lips of Nathan C. Miller, "old-time fiddler," was asking his visitor as he celebrated his 81st birthday with strains from his 147-year-old violin.

Retired N. Y. Central Engineer Learned to Play at 10 on 50-Cent Violin—Widely Known Radio Artist

A little old man, his head fringed by more than four score winters, sat in his home at 200 Norwood Avenue Friday, holding lovingly in his hands a violin that was as old as the man himself.

For a while the violin would lie across his knees and he would sit very still with the look in his eyes of one who had detached himself in spirit from his own material surroundings and was wandering in the misty realms of memory.

Then he would raise the age-browned violin, whose wood has the velvet softness that comes only with many, many years. He would place the instrument under his chin, adjust himself, touch the strings with a bow held by fingers from which age had taken none of their artist's suppleness.

Maybe it would be "Turkey in the Straw" that he would draw from those strings in a way that made one's feet hard to keep quiet. Or maybe it would be a classic composition, such as the mazette make important features of great metropolitan recitals. He played both types of music as if each were as dear to him as the other.

It was Nathan C. Miller, retired New York Central engineer and "old time fiddler," celebrating his 81st birthday.

Nathan C. Miller is a personality. Hundreds of Syracusans know his music, however, without being acquainted with the man himself, for he has played for the radio a great deal in the last 11 years since he was retired by the Central after 42 years of service.

"All I do is the oldies," the old-time fiddler commented. "He will tell you that he has handled the throttles of 710 engines in his day and fired another 172 before he was promoted to be an engineer. Among the locomotives he has operated have been the big ones that drew the 20th Century and the Empire State Express. He never had either of those crack trains regularly, but took the runs numbers of time as a substitute engineer.

As for his "fiddles"—the first one he ever owned cost 25 cents and he learned to play "Turkey in the Straw" on it when he was 10. He has been "fiddling" ever since.

Mr. Miller lives alone at the Norwood Avenue address, but Mrs. William Parker, who lives next door, keeps house and cooks for him. "All I do is the oldies," the old-time fiddler commented.

He was born at Lanesville, Fulton County, on Aug. 19, 1857, and has only one close relative living, a daughter, Mrs. Claude Bennett, of Port Byron, who came to Syracuse to be with him on his birthday.

There was no formal celebration—just the memories, the fiddle and the music that Mr. Miller loves.

Hearing Waved By Prisoner Held in 109 Burglaries

Andrew Jackson Madison, 45, of 419 Harrison Street, a Negro, who allegedly admitted committing 109 burglaries in three years and averaging only $1 a day "take," waived examination in Police Court Friday on a third degree burglary charge and was ordered held for the Grand Jury.

He pleaded not guilty to the charge when arraigned Aug. 6. The court ordered him held in $2,000 bail for the hearing Friday.

Police said Madison made a sworn statement that he had "netted" about $1,100 in burglaries committed through 1935, 1937 and part of 1938, all between 5 and 6 A. M. when he was on his way to work on a WPA project.

He used this proceeds to pay bills, he said.

Drive Ahead Parade Will Be Saturday

Anyone May Join March; Drum Corps to Be Featured

An informal parade in which representatives of business and manufacturing firms will express their confidence in the return of better times to Syracuse will be held Saturday as one of the features of the Forward Syracuse campaign.

No advance planning is necessary for participation in the parade, Chamber of Commerce officials pointed out. The parade will begin at 11:45 A. M. "Anyone can come in the parade anywhere and at any time while it is in progress," one of the officials said. "The more the merrier."

The line of march will be from Milling Park north through Salina Street to Oswego Boulevard, where automobiles provided by car dealers will pick up members of drum and bugle corps from Syracuse and other communities and bring them to Griffin Field for drills and a concert starting at 1 P. M.

Merchants continued to report trade progress as the result of the Forward Syracuse drive.

Housing Area Owners Face Court Aug. 27

Must Show Cause Why They Should Not Give Way to Project

Show cause order was granted by Justice Frank J. Cregg in Supreme Court Friday noon calling on owners of 20 parcels of property in the Syracuse housing area to answer at 10 A. M. Aug. 27, why they should not give over possession of their property to the Syracuse Housing Authority.

The procedure is a step in the acquisition of property by purchase or through condemnation. The property is assessed at $126,000 and under the plan the owners would receive $100,000.

The amount must be deposited by the Housing Authority with the County Treasurer, John Chalmers, as security for the property owners.

Handing by the court in favor of the Authority will enable demolition of the property next week. If, as desired, it is said, John F. Hmel, chief counsel of the Authority, obtained the order from Justice Cregg. It is said to have the force of a wholesale eviction.

The owners of the parcels concerned will be served and notice posted on all premises to the effect that possession is to be taken Aug. 27. The order means in effect that tenants, if any in such premises, must vacate on or before that date.

The property comprises less than 10 per cent of that in the five blocks where demolition has been started. The total number of buildings is given as 350.

Charles Dutch, United States Housing Authority expert on soil and construction, has conferred with Sargent N. Grimm regarding the Syracuse project and will pass on detailed plans for the project.

William H. Eddy, 48, of 808 Robinson Road, foreman of the engine house of the D. L. & W. Railroad, Marcellus Street yards, suffered serious injuries to his head, chest and back Friday morning when a wooden covering over a pit gave way and he plunged seven feet to the bottom.

Police said the wooden planks gave way under the weight of a pair of small locomotive wheels which Mr. Eddy was wheeling in a cart. The wheels fell with him to the bottom. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in an ambulance.

Hospital attendants said he suffered serious cuts and bruises over the left eye, at the base of his head and on his chest. There was some possibility, the attendants said, that he also had skull. His condition was described as "not serious."

Calls Marvin G.O.P. Leader For Governor

Hanley Tells Grain Men Mayor and Dewey Are in Front in Race

Mayor Roland B. Marvin, of Syracuse, and District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York County, are now leading the race for the Republican gubernatorial nomination and "either one could be elected," State Senator Joe R. Hanley, said Thursday night at the Hotel Syracuse.

The Senator, in the city to address a meeting of the New York State Hay and Grain Dealers Association, said he based his opinion on a recent "ear to the ground" survey of the State.

In his speech to the hay and grain dealers, he said in part: "The time has come when we must have rural representation. The fact remains we are not drawing the farm vote—in fact we're losing it, and, with agriculture in such a terrible condition, we must have a man on the ticket who the farmers know will help them."

"The Republican party has got to get out of the Pullman cars and into the day coaches; it must get off the country club porch and down to the sidewalk."

"And, furthermore, this is the year for the party to do it. If they nominate the right type of man he's bound to win and if he doesn't win I don't know when he will. Everything depends on the type of ticket the party offers the voters."

Boat Upsets; 2 Saved at Oneida Lake

Fishermen Cling to Craft Until Rescued by Game Protector

Were Landing Fish Saved by Anchor Which Kept Boat From Blowing Out of Reach

Thrown into the water when their rowboat overturned on Oneida Lake, half a mile off the north shore, near Cleveland, two fishermen were rescued Thursday afternoon as they clung to their upset craft.

Bert Shepard, of 203 Mackay Avenue, Fairmount, and George Schatzle, of Newark, were the men rescued. Their boat was anchored when it tipped over, preventing a strong wind from carrying it out of reach.

As they held on to the boat, one of the men cut the anchor loose, and then started paddling with their feet in an effort to reach shore. They were about 200 feet from land when Game Protector Harry Best reached them in his rowboat.

The fishermen reported one of them had hooked a bass and they were both trying to slip the landing net under it when their rowboat tipped over. The lake was choppy and a high wind was blowing, but Shepard and Schatzle, although poor swimmers, managed to reach the craft as they came to the surface.

Best said the men's lives were probably saved by the fact that the boat was anchored. Otherwise it would have been blown out of reach and the fishermen might have drowned, he added.

Title Problem Delays New Playground

Half of Area at Old Public Market Under Development

Work on the south section of the new city playground at the Public Market administration building has been delayed due to long title problems. It is announced in connection with report on progress of the city park and playground development program for the year.

North of the administration building, the WPA project is being carried forward but no start has been made on the area south of Butternut Street. Development of land both north and south of the building was planned, with the building itself to become a community center, as well as serving as a headquarters for the retail market being conducted on the old market site.

Commissioner of Parks William A. Park said that five additional to the park and playground system this year would add 33 acres to the total under development, making the total 675 acres, in 150 parcels.

The Morningside Park and winter playground, extending from Broad Street to East Colvin Street, the Comstock-Corvin playground and the Comstock-Corvin city nursery at Comstock Avenue and East Colvin Street, are new developments on land obtained by the city from the Morningside Cemetery Association and worked up as WPA projects.

The old Sheridan School playground, at Burnett Avenue and South Middle Avenue, and the old city market playground are the other developments.
