

Woman Sought in Hit and Run Auto Death

Sedan Hurts Man Fatally, Speeds Away

Markie Harris Victim of Accident at Cortland and Tallman

Elman Badly Hurt Critically Injured, Motorist Directs Rescue From Wreckage

One man was injured fatally, another man and a boy were hurt critically and a third man escaped serious harm in automobile accidents in and around Syracuse late yesterday afternoon and last night.

Markie (Mickey) Harris, 48, was the man injured fatally, dying an hour after he was admitted to the General Hospital of Syracuse. He was struck by a sedan, reported to have been driven by a woman, at Cortland Avenue and Tallman Street. The auto failed to stop.

The critically injured are Samuel Brown, 23, of 417 Maple Street, clothing manufacturer, and Paul Pinnocchio, 9, of 108 Delhi Street. Harris was taken to the General Hospital of Syracuse at 9 o'clock last night by Edward Austin, 1015 South Salina Street. He told Acting Detectives Barry and Leach that he saw Harris lying in the street in time to stop before running over him. The man had been struck, he reported, by a sedan, driven by a woman, who passed without intersection, just ahead of him.

Harris was brought by hospital physicians to be suffering only minor injuries and police allowed Austin to go before making a formal statement.

Police received a message from the hospital at 10 o'clock that Harris was dead. Austin could not be located again last night by the police. At his home his brother said Austin probably had gone to Homer.

Austin said he brought his machine to a stop just before the front wheels touched the injured man. Joseph Johnson, 212 Tremont Street, drove up in his car and helped place the injured man in Austin's car.

Coroner W. R. Winnie was notified and the body was removed to the morgue.

Harris, widely known in downtown Syracuse, was known as a waiter. He was a resident of Syracuse all his life. He was a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Royal Order of Moose, Syracuse lodge.

Surviving are five sisters, Mrs. Max Schuman of New York City, Mrs. John Sano of Rochester, Mrs. Isaac C. McGraw and Mrs. Ray Harris, all of Syracuse, and two brothers, Louis and Philip Harris.

Coroner Winnie later released the body to William F. Hart, undertaker, who removed it to the Jewish Chapel, 617 Montgomery Street, where a funeral will be conducted at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon at Rabbi M. J. Brin's funeral home in Jamesville Gate Cemetery.

Losing control of his coupe in an effort to pass a truck on the South Bay road, Samuel Elman, 63, of 417 Maple Street, clothing manufacturer, was critically injured at 8:25 P. M. yesterday when his machine crashed into a telephone pole, rebounded and struck a danger sign. The coupe was wrecked.

The injured man was removed to the Crouse-irving Hospital, where his left arm was amputated at the shoulder last night. He also suffered severe cuts on the left side of his head and chest injuries.

Elman remained conscious, despite his serious hurts, and directed the efforts of the truck driver, Raymond Delong, 22, of Mexico, in freeing him from the wreckage. Delong made a tour of the scene, took a handkerchief and a stick to save Elman.

Delong finally got the promise of an ambulance, which came from the Crouse-irving Hospital. In about half an hour Mr. Elman remained conscious all this time and told passing motorists who stopped at the scene of the crash, how the accident happened.

He said that he stepped on the accelerator and his machine gathered speed as it came over the bump beyond the point where the Bremer road truck enters the South Bay road. Elman made an effort to pass the truck, going in the same direction, he lost control of the car.

While waiting for the arrival of the ambulance, Mr. Elman dictated a telegram to his brother, Ralph Elman, in St. Louis, telling him to come immediately and bring him to come immediately and bring him to come immediately.

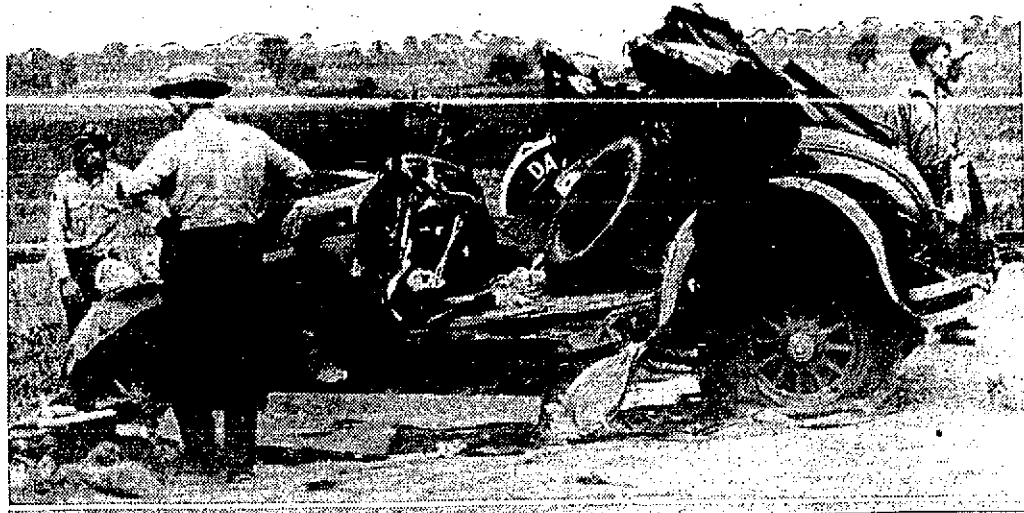

The Pinnocchio boy suffered internal injuries when he was hit by a city truck, driven by Albert Gaughan, of 208 Nicholas Avenue, and tossed against another machine. The accident occurred on Erie Boulevard near North Cottage Avenue, yesterday afternoon. The boy was removed to St. Joseph Hospital, where he suffered internal hemorrhages.

Acting Detective Casey, who investigated, was told that the boy started across the street in front of the truck. The driver said he saw the truck to one side, but the bumper struck him with just enough force to hurl him in front of a car going in the opposite direction, driven by Dr. Harriet M. Deane, of Palaski.

Phillip Ryan of Baldwinsville reported to Detective Harry Nood that he had a narrow escape late last night when his machine was wrecked at the intersection of Erie Boulevard and Van Rensselaer Street. His car skidded and crashed into a telephone pole when he applied the emergency brakes to avoid striking a car coming out of Van Rensselaer Street. He told the detective.

Mrs. Victor E. Miller and her 12-year-old daughter, Jean Miller, of 430 East Manlius Street, East Syracuse, suffered minor hurts last night when they were struck by an automobile at James Street and Hastings Place.

Blast Burns Prove Fatal To Mother, 24

Mrs. Gladys Landeau Dies After Desperate Fight to Live

Mrs. Gladys Landeau, 24, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee, 515 Lodi Street, died at 4:40 o'clock this morning in Crouse-irving Hospital of burns suffered in a gasoline explosion at her home on the night of June 17 when she was heating milk for her baby.

Mrs. Landeau, who was critically injured from the blast, died in the explosion, had been making a desperate fight for life in the hospital and physicians fought her recovery.

Hampers in her fight for recovery by the knowledge that her sister, Miss Lucille Lee, had died two days before Mrs. Landeau was burned, the woman suffered a relapse last night. Her parents are prostrated with grief.

Mrs. Landeau was standing at the kitchen stove while her father, Lee, brought a small bottle of gasoline to start a fire. When he poured the fluid on the fire there was a slight explosion since the flame in the stove had already ignited. Fortunately, Mrs. Landeau brushed against the flames as Lee swung around to throw the

Her night clothing flared up and in an effort to beat out the flames she suffered burns on her hands. Her father ran out of the house thereby fanning the flames. Lee followed and beat out the fire with his hands which were also burned severely.

County morgue officials after an investigation released the body to Bunch & Grayner undertakers.

The funeral will take place from the home in Lodi Street Monday morning and later in St. Joseph's (French) Church, where a solemn high mass of requiem will be celebrated.

Surviving Mrs. Landeau are her husband, Howard Landeau; her son, Howard Landeau, Jr.; her parents; six sisters, Mrs. Floyd Sova, Mrs. John Donohue, Mrs. Michael George and the Misses Gertrude, Rita and Mary Lee, and a brother, Everett Lee.

Child Taken Away by Force, Mother Charges in Her Suit

Order Directs Girl, 3, Be Brought Into Court

Indian Grave 15 Centuries Old Places Binghamton as Ancient Algonkian Center

Skeleton of Old Man Found Resting in Primitive Pose—Relics Establish Archeological Value

Excavative Dispatch to The Herald, Binghamton, Sept. 13.—Pinning of an old burial place at Willow Point on the farm of Roger P. Clark, former law partner of former Governor Harvey D. Hinman, resulted in archeological investigation leading to unearthing yesterday afternoon an ancient Algonkian skeleton, believed to have been buried 1,500 years ago.

The opinion on the date of the burial was given by William A. Ritchie, assistant archeologist of the Rochester Museum of Arts and Sciences. The bones, greatly disintegrated but still in condition to afford valuable evidence of early aboriginal occupation of the region, were found four and a half feet under the surface.

The excavation also disclosed a large jar, pronounced by Mr. Ritchie to be an Algonkian pot, of unpressed design. There were fragments of other pottery.

The archeologist arrived here to study the grave of a young Indian woman found last week, uncovered by a storm.

Her burial in a wooden case assembled with wrought iron nails dates the time of her death as about the middle of the eighteenth century.

Her race is established absolutely by the fastening of the back of her skull by the cradle-board used for carrying Indian infants.

Romance and speculation concerning the Indian girl and her white burial began at once to weave explanations, mainly based on a wilderness courtship and marriage such as recorded in many cases among the first settlers.

Perforated thimbles, evidently of European origin, and from their position in the grave apparently worn by the girl as ornaments, gave more corroboration to the agency of a white protector.

The later find, yesterday, while of larger scientific interest and of some bearing in research in pre-Indian occupation of the region, were found only on this continent by the archeologist.

The historic ground yielded arrowheads, stone pebbles and fragments which Mr. Ritchie obtained from Mr. Clark to take to Rochester for examination, measurement and comparison with other relics at the Rochester museum.

The skeleton was found in a recumbent position, legs drawn up and arms at the sides, indicating burial in a position as of one sleeping on the side in a cold place. The position is characteristic of primitive burial customs of the time.

Archaeologists in Europe, archeologists here in America, are of the opinion that the skeleton is that of an old man, Mr. Ritchie said.

Richard Arlen Finds Action As "Sea God"

Struggle for Pearls and Girl Gives Plenty of Thrills

Plenty of action attends Richard Arlen's latest vehicle, "The Sea God," a South Seas thriller, at the Paramount. It is a stirring tale of two men's struggle for the possession of a girl and pearls. Although somewhat overdrawn, the plot is absorbing enough to provide good entertainment.

Pink Barber and his bitter rival, Schultz, set sail on separate expeditions for an island where pearls are reputed to be abundant. Daisie, the girl for whom the two men have quarreled, stows away in Pink's boat to escape being forced into marriage with Schultz.

The island at last is reached, and Pink dons a diver's suit and goes down for his first try at locating the pearls. While he is submerged, however, several boat loads of cannibals appear on the scene carrying away Daisie, killing the rest of the crew, and burning Pink's boat. The latter, realising that something has happened, goes ashore, and there, stumbling into the camp of the cannibals who have taken Daisie prisoner, is mistaken for a God and made her temporary release.

In the meantime Schultz and his men have arrived at the island and the feud becomes three-cornered. Arlen handles the part well enough, considering its far-fetched qualities. Fay-Wray, however, is hardly up to the mark. The scenery is beautiful.—C. H.

Melodrama With Music Plays Strand

"Bright Lights" Is Newest Talkie Filmed in All-Color

By CHESTER B. BAIN
To those benighted souls who still believe that honesty is the best policy, that truth is mighty and must prevail, and that the law should take its course when homicide is concerned, "Bright Lights" will come as a shock.

But great as their astonishment may be at what happens in the Strand's all-color musical melodrama, it will be shaded by the jolt the fourth estate must receive from the caricatured gentlemen (and ladies) of the press in the picture.

It may be wholly for comedy purposes (and I trust that it is) but the picture drawn of newspaper folk and newspaper ethics in "Bright Lights" is the rawest yet to come to my attention.

Not only do we again have the traditional drunken reporter (who would last about as long as it would take to kick him out of the office) but he gives orders to the editor over the telephone.

Investigating the presence of beer trucks on the Syracuse-Baldwinsville road, Federal prohibition agents yesterday found that they were plying back and forth between a farm on the outskirts of Baldwinsville and Syracuse.

When the trucks failed to the other end of their route, further investigation led to issuance of a search warrant and a raid on the farm a few hours later.

In a small barn behind the farmhouse, the Federal men uncovered a gallon was were filled with fermenting brew mash.

The seizure also included 75 empty barrels, apparatus for barrel-fermentation and further commits the unflattering professional, sin of concealing the truth from his paper.

If his conduct as a working newspaper man is reprehensible, his personal morals are no better. The director (Michael Curtiz) takes pains to establish that his advances to a blonde performer are improper and insulting.

That's that. As Entertainment, "Bright Lights" has certain things to recommend it. The backstage theme is employed again, but with a novel twist. Flashbacks are utilized to tell the colorful story of the hero's life, and to establish characters who figure in present action.

The performances, in the main, are acceptable if not noteworthy. Dorothy Mackaill gives the best portrayal as Louanne with Frank Fay playing more or less straight opposite her. Noah Berry is the wicked heavy, and Frank McHugh is the drunken reporter.

Color values are good, and the musical and dance number are entertaining at the moment but not likely to be long remembered.

Lew's State, with a penchant for special weeks, months and what have you, adds another today with Joy Week which brings Buster Keaton's marital comedy, "Dough Boys," and "The Laurel and Hardy Murder Case," a three-reel mut production.

"All Quiet on the Western Front," Universal's production of Erich Remarque's famed novel, opened at the Fox-Eckel at midnight last night. Lewis Ayres and Louis Wolheim are prominent in the cast. Lewis Milestone directed.

Betty Carter's role in Radio Pictures' all-talking drama, "Inside the Line," at Keltie's, is that of the wife of a British general, and the sworn enemy of all things Teutonic. In private life she was the warm and personal friend of Pokker, German air genius. She describes many flights taken with Pokker over Holland after the Armistice, which established her a loyal British subject, to renew friendships made in Germany before the war.

Once a sap, always a sap... and so Jack Oakie, having immortalized "The Sap from Syracuse" on the screen will next make "Only Saps Work" in a newspaper story with Jack as an Arkansas country lad who tries to pose him as a mob of gun and knife-toting metropolitan gangsters.

Pilot Cleared Of Blame in 2 Drownings

Oswego District Attorney Finds No Negligence in Oneida Lake Tragedy

Exclusive Dispatch to The Herald, Oswego, Sept. 13.—District Attorney Harry M. Stacy has announced that he found no evidence of negligence in the drowning of two Syracuse women a week ago Friday in Oneida Lake near South Bay.

Mr. Stacy received the same testimony as was given Coroner William R. Winnie of Onondaga County and Sergt. Martin Dillon of the North Syracuse sub-station of the State Police a week ago. The four survivors of the speed boat accident, previously had been exonerated from any blame by Onondaga County authorities.

Francis Wolfe, 491 Oak Street, Syracuse, pilot of the boat, said he leaned over to bite a sandwich which had been handed to him. As he did so, the launch listed to the left. Wolfe said he turned the wheel and the boat listed to the right and then back to the left, finally overturning.

Mrs. Genevieve Lotz, 221 East Colburn Street, and Mrs. Elizabeth Gilliam, 617 East Genesee Street, both of Syracuse, were thrown into the water with occupants and drowned.

Other survivors of the boat, E. Norbert Zahn, 1918 Lodi Street, Syracuse, owner of the craft, George R. O'Brien, 1003 Willis Avenue, Syracuse, and Mrs. Emil Sorenk of the Syracuse Yacht and Country Club at South Bay, gave the same testimony as Wolfe.
